MELISSA'S
LETTER

By Martha McCulloch-Williams
Copyright, 1905,
by Martha McCulloch-Williams

It was rainy within and without. Melissa looked through dim eyes at the streamy window panes, the long slant lines outside. Her aunt Judith viewed them instead with satisfaction—they would serve so well to excuse Melissa's nonappearance at the cemetery. Nobody, indeed, would go there but the men of the post, the fliers and drummers, and maybe a few fool politicians, intent on catching the Grand Army vote. Thus thought Aunt Judith to herself.

As Miss Hill and later Mrs. Bent, Aunt Judith had not spent fifty odd years in Carmel town without finding herself able to forecast rather accurately what the townfolk would or would not do.

Until this season she had been strenuous in observing Memorial day. Even yet, notwithstanding her quarrel with the Farings and all their tribe, she did not mean openly to slight the occasion. She did not mean either that Melissa should go along, the pet of thinning, gray bearded ranks, her arms full of flowers for the quiet green graves. Melissa wasn't a child any more—going on nineteen and with her head full of love and marriage.

Neither Melissa nor Aunt Judith had killed or killed in the cemetery; there had been no man of their blood to go off to the fighting. All the same, Melissa had always saved her choicest blossoms for one especial mound, Private John Farings' grave. John Farings 3d, the private's great-nephew, had seen her do it, with open worshiping eyes.

"He's your Uncle John, too," Johnny had said, over and over, "because as soon as we grow up your name will be Melissa Farings."

When a very young man proposes, his elders often disapprove. John and Melissa had found that out when Miss Adrienne Day came on the scene. That was six months back. Miss Day had a temper and a big nose, but she also had a fortune in hand.

Judge Farings and the madam were mightily taken with her, as she in return was taken with their son. So they had set to work to break off that childish affair between John and Melissa. They were not mercenary, only thrifty ambitious for their one child. Therefore it seemed to them hard and cruel the way Mrs. Bent took fire at their well meant suggestions. Sell their her house and go away indeed! She would have them know if there was any moving done they might do it themselves. She would have them remember also a Hill had founded Carmel; also that the Farings of that time hadn't amounted to much. But they were not to think that she was for hanging on to Johnny Farings. Goodness knew, Melissa could have better chances simply for turning over her hand. She (Mrs. Bent) had felt all along that with her looks and her blood Melissa ought to look higher. But, as to telling the child what to do, well, that remained with herself. Still, if Melissa had any ill blood in her, it was mighty unlikely she would go into a family that didn't make her welcome.

The inevitable outcome was a break and a pair of sore hearts. Then fate took up the running and in cruel kindness gave Melissa a fortune—a fortune twice as big as Miss Adrienne Day could show. Johnny Farings did not give up hope until he heard of it. Then he turned very white, and after a sleepless night shook the dust of Carmel from his feet. He could never go to Melissa and make her hear reason now that such going would seem shameless fortune hunting.

As yet the fortune had made little outward change, except that there were no more customers coming to the Bent house, the old Hill homestead. Aunt Judith bustled about helping the maid of all work, the while keeping a covert watch upon her niece. After a little she said, speaking half meditatively:

"Come on up in the garret, Melissa. A rainy day like this always makes me want to rummage. Besides, I've got to get out the flags. We'll put one right on the peak of the porch and the other over the front door. Of course nobody'll see 'em. Even this town won't turn out in face of such a storm, but I just can't let the flag pass same as any other. Even if the flags get spoiled we can afford to buy new ones."

"Yes," Melissa said absently, "but—don't feel like rummaging. Aunt, Ju. I think I'll go write some letters instead, if you don't mind."

"H-m! Who to?" Mrs. Bent asked sharply.

Melissa smiled wistfully. "I hardly know," she said. "Ma, he I shan't write any—only sit and sew. It's about all I can do. I think there will be no getting out today."

"There won't be. Take care of yourself. Don't mope," Mrs. Bent said, bustling away.

Melissa went softly to her own room, opened her desk and swiftly wrote three lines. Then she shuffled into her waterproof and stole out very softly with what she had written tucked safely in her breast. She crept through the garden, longed, yet not daring, to take the best of its bloom, darted through the gate and almost ran to the cemetery.

On the way she stopped here or there to pluck roadside blossoms—white clover, folded dandelions, big blue, scentless violets. All these she bound into a knot with a blade of grass. It was not a big knot. It would hardly show in the long grass over a sunny grave.

As she bent at last to lay it on the grave she thrust into it the note. Then, without a backward look, she hurried away, with her absence undiscovered. She sat down by the window, but her eyes were no longer dim. Instead they looked out at the rainy world, bright and full of expectation.

John Farings 3d had come home for Memorial day and in spite of the storm went out to the cemetery. The post had come and gone—all the old fellows in carriages heaped with flowers—but somehow the graves did not look as he remembered. The flowers were trampled and trampled and trampled. Private John Farings had not been forgotten, but his resting place especially was unlike itself. John 3d knelt down by it, heedless of oozy turf, and tried with manly awkwardness to better its arrangement. Thus his eyes rested upon the knot of wild flowers and caught the dull gleam of folded paper in the midst of them. Reverently he unfolded the note and read with blurred vision:

Dear Uncle John—I bring you all I can. I have never seen the flowers. I love it. John Farings is the best name in the world. I wish my name might be Farings. There was no signature. John 3d needed none. He bent and kissed the knot of flowers, still fresh under the pouring rain, then, with an unuttered prayer, turned about and went with long strides toward the Bent house. Melissa had called to him. He would go to her in spite of pride, in spite of unmanly fear. What if the world did scoff? He could endure it a hundred times over just to look once again into her eyes and see happiness. He had been a coward, no kill at all to the soldier sleeping there in peace, to have let the quarrel of the elders separate him from his sweetheart—doubtless dear to that she had shown herself thus brave. Melissa met him on the porch. The wet flag bravely strove to flutter in the rainy wind over their heads. For a minute they stood apart, looking one at the other. Then John held open his arms, saying:

"Barring, I found the letter, and I am never going to leave you unless you say I must."

"I say you must stay," Melissa said under her breath and hiding her face in his breast.

CATCHING A LOON.

The Way a Hunter Got One and Why He Let It Go.

Once, and only once, I caught a young northern diver, says Graham West in Recreation. It was in July in the Laurentians in a little lake far back in the forest covered hills—loons always nest on small islands in lakes, never where foxes can get at the eggs or young. The birds at first are coal black. The one I took was the size of a pigeon and it took me twenty minutes to get it. When pursued the little fellows make for the open deep water, never skulk among the weeds, and rely entirely upon their wonderful diving powers. You can only catch them when they are very young and on a perfectly calm day when you can see them the instant they come up. I followed the bird so quickly that I was always near when it rose and by shouting and brandishing the paddle frightened it into diving before it had regained its wind. At length it could not dive more than a foot or two below the surface and then I caught it in my hand. It was savage and sea-sick in the canoe. The mother kept near it from first to last, swam round the canoe, calling most plaintively the while, the note being "Whe-out-out," quite distinct from the usual mocking laugh, "Ha-ha-ha-ha! Ha-ha-ha-ha!" I paddled the little loon about a mile and then put it overboard very gently, and the mother let it off in triumph.

Dear Uncle John—I bring you all I can. I have never seen the flowers. I love it. John Farings is the best name in the world. I wish my name might be Farings.

Auctions in France.
The French mode of conducting auctions is rather curious. In sales of importance, such as of land, houses, etc., the affair is placed in the hands of a notary, who for the time being becomes an auctioneer. The property, whatever be its nature, is first examined by competent judges, who fix upon it a price, considerably less than its value, but always sufficient to prevent any ruinous loss by a preconcerted plan or combination of bidders. The property is then offered with the fixed valuation stated. The auctioneer is provided with a number of small wax tapers, each capable of burning about five minutes. As soon as a bid is made one of these tapers is placed in full view of all interested parties and lighted. If before it expires another bid is offered, it is immediately extinguished and a fresh taper placed in its stead, and so on until one flickers and dies out of view. When the last bid becomes irrevocable. This simple plan prevents all contention among rival bidders and affords a reasonable time for reflection before making a higher offer than the one preceding. By this means, too, the auctioneer is prevented from exercising undue influence upon the bidders or hastily accepting the bid of a favorite.

A Queen's Blunder.
For some time after her marriage with Napoleon III, Empress Marie Louise was extremely ignorant of the French language. On one occasion, seeing her husband look vexed over a letter he had received from the court of Austria, she inquired of him what was the matter. "Oh, nothing," replied Napoleon; "your father is an old gamester, that is all." Marie Louise did not know that this was French for fool and took the first opportunity of asking a question which it meant, saying to the emperor what it meant, saying the expression to her father. "It means some one very learned and wise," stammered the unfortunate courtier. The empress was perfectly satisfied with this explanation and pleased to learn a new word. A day or two after she received the Archchancellor Cambaceres in a crowded salon. Some question was being warmly discussed in the circle, and her opinion was asked. "Wishing to be very gracious, Marie Louise turned to Cambaceres and said, "We will refer that point to the archbishop, for we all know he is the greatest gamester in Paris."

Abiding Impressions.
It is said that by a certain experiment you may perceive on the retina of an ox's eye, some time after death, the pictures of the objects upon which it had last looked. If this is true of the eye of the ox, what shall we say of the soul of man? If on the eye impressions are made which abide after death, what of impressions made upon the conscience, the memory and the whole retina of the immortal spirit? Surely these abide after death. Is it possible even to erase one? Do not all impressions, from the first to the last, through life, made in all ways, continue as immortal as the soul itself? Surely we undying ones ought to be careful upon what objects we look from which we get impressions upon our souls. The impressions made on the soul in time will form their own picture gallery, upon each of which it will gaze through the boundless ages of eternity.—Bate.

How He Got the Moon.
John Henry Melville, the astronomer, whose favorite study was the moon, having learned that Frau Witte, the wife of the state councillor, owned a wonderful model of his pet luminary, spent years trying to gain possession of it. As her husband was living, he could not marry the owner of the model, so he married her daughter, and at the death of his mother-in-law the coveted moon became his.

A Lesson Wanted.
A mother was showing her dear little Joe a picture of the martyrs thrown to the lions and was talking very solemnly to him, trying to make him feel what a terrible thing it was.

"Ma," said he all at once, "oh, ma, just look at that poor little lion right behind there. He won't get any."

DO YOU FEEL THIS WAY.
Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, are you awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach empty? Has ambition to force ahead in the world made you feel this way?

If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different person. It will set your sluggish liver to work. It will get into every vein in your body and purify your blood. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about speedy cure in 95 per cent of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

O. S. Copenhagen, Esq., of Mount Union, twelve years ago I was suddenly taken with a pain in the pit of the stomach which was so violent I could not walk straight. It would grow more severe until it caused waterbrash and vomit. I had a form of dyspepsia and treated me for about six months with but little benefit. Another physician told me my liver was out of order and that I had indigestion. He gave me a treatment and I got some better but only for a short time. I then tried another one, who said I had chronic indigestion, ulceration of the lining of the stomach, torpid liver and kidney affection. He treated me for more than a year and I felt much better, but it did not last. I then took a course of several widely advertised patent medicines, but received no more than temporary relief. I then tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, using his "Golden Medical Discovery," and the "Pleasant Pellets," and in two weeks my time was felt better than I had for years before.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer in taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good."

Real Childhood

"A happy childhood is the pledge of a ripe manhood."

THERE has been agitation in regard to decreasing vacation time in the large cities of the country owing to the fact that some investigators declare that vacation in the city begets idleness and vicious acquirements, instead of healthy recreation. The only solution they seem to offer for this condition of affairs is to keep the children at school, and keep them away from evil influences. There is too much tendency nowadays to take away recreation from children, and if something radical is not done the old fashioned "sweet boyhood days" and free from care childhood will be unknown conditions. The children of today are being crammed in schools by teachers of poor judgment and out of schools by over ambitious parents, and are being worked in factories and shops despite child labor laws. For the proper development of the adult, healthy recreation is necessary to the child. It is safer to trust to the children getting into the right channel during vacation time in the big cities than it is to keep them cooped up in poorly ventilated school rooms, suppressing their natural exuberance and spirits and dwarfing them physically and mentally. The latter way is a sure way to produce weaklings and low grade adults, who will be good for nothing, or susceptible to crime and temptation. There are many opportunities in the big cities of today where lively boys and girls can get healthy vacations. They can get away from the cities and out into the country among the orchards, vineyards and hop fields. Here they can find recreation and work that will do them no harm; where sunshine and fresh air will create in them new impulses and ambitions. There are opportunities of this kind for the school children of big cities in vacation time, but those that fear they will drift into evil channels instead, should have a better remedy than to keep them in the school room at their books. Field days in the country would be highly beneficial and infinitely more satisfactory than school room work. Children's playgrounds are also valuable accessories and should be encouraged and made good use of in the big cities.

We frequently hear now of child suicide and the cause is to be found in the modern desire of seeking to repress juvenile spirit and to make abnormal beings out of boys and girls before their little minds and bodies are able to stand the tension. What we want today most of all is children who are children, not the children who are old beyond their years. Childhood is a preparation for after life, and it is a constructive period. If we attempt to build an incomplete foundation the finished structure will be weak. So if we attempt to crowd everything on the child before it has the proper foundation, it will result ultimately in self-destruction—a slow breaking down process, or the clouding of mind, which may end in suicide.

Mothers are worse than slave drivers who will cram their children with music, for instance, and force them to abnormality, as was the case in San Francisco recently, where a child musician died of spinal meningitis, as a result of overwork. Child labor laws are necessary to restrict the evils they cover, but there should be laws still more far reaching than these. The schoolroom and the home are as liable to dwarf and cripple the child's faculties and menace coming generations, as are the factories and shops. The process may be different; but the results are apt to be the same.

WHEN Britt saw his fight on the biograph, He couldn't smile and he couldn't laugh, But he thought and thought of his awful game, And how he felt when the Nelson crash came. He was seeing himself as others had, When out at Colma he went to the bad. All his mistakes were plain to be seen, Too plain in fact, on the picture machine.

THE last we heard of George Collins he was sleeping on the straw-strewn floor of a Victoria jail, but now it seems he is resting on his laurels in one of Victoria's best hotels, and making the authorities figure out how his bills are to be paid. The way of the transgressor is not so hard after all when some one pays his way.

We congratulate the seven great unknowns who changed their minds last Monday and voted for bonding. These men show that they were open to conviction, and were broad minded enough to investigate and be convinced that bonding is the way of the progressive.

Pawnee Indian Doctor.

Frank P. Burgess, the Pawnee Indian Doctor, arrived in town on Wednesday, and is stopping at the City Hotel, where he will remain for one week. The Pawnee Indian Medicine Company were here some ten years ago, and will be well and favorably remembered by many of our citizens. The Doctor is here now on an advertising tour, and will be pleased to meet people, ladies especially, at the parlor of the hotel, where he locates all diseases without asking questions, and free of charge. The Doctor is not selling his remedies, or practicing medicine, but merely takes this method of seeing people, and building up a drug store trade. The Doctor has had an office at 941 Howard street, for the past quarter of a century, where he sees thousands of people. Call early and see him, and don't miss this chance to find out what really is the matter with you. For further particulars see circulated tickets, Guides to Health, etc.

Marcel Delbary, Formerly

ing Wife Behind.

Marcel Delbary, formerly chef at the City Hotel and later a farmer residing on the old Walliser place south of town, has left his happy home for parts unknown. He went to San Francisco about two weeks ago, promising to return, but after several days went by and he failed to put in an appearance, his wife of a few months communicated with friends in the city as to the whereabouts of her husband. She was told that he did not know just where he was, but that he was not coming back to her. Delbary married the lady, who is now his wife, after three days acquaintance, and has just been married to her three months.

Mrs. Delbary is very philosophical about the desertion, however, and says she will sell off all of the property and move, too, if her husband does not change his mind and come back.

New Pastor Tendered Reception

A reception was tendered Rev. Mr. C. C. Cragin, the new pastor of the Congregational Church, by the Ladies' Aid Society Tuesday evening. The reception was held in the Sunday school rooms of the church, which had been daintily decorated with autumn leaves and flowers.

Mrs. Stearns, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, presided. B. F. Campbell delivered an address of welcome in behalf of the church and congregation. A fraternal welcome was given by Rev. Roe of the M. E. Church and Rev. Cragin responded with a few appropriate remarks. Musical numbers by Misses Fraser and Stofen, Mrs. Roe and Mr. Cunningham added much to the pleasure of the evening.

After the program refreshments were served and many good wishes extended to Mr. Cragin in his new field of work.

WANTS SHARE OF OHM ESTATE

Mrs. O'Connell, a Sister of Late Chas. Ohm, Will Contest for Property
Widow

There promises to be a bitter legal contest over the $15,000 or $20,000 estate left by Mrs. Cornelia Ohm, between the sisters of the deceased, Mrs. Riedl and Mrs. Shirley, and a sister of the late Chas. Ohm, Mrs. O'Connell of San Francisco. Mrs. O'Connell will go through the courts in order to get what she considers her rights.

The Ohms left no children, so the estate will necessarily go to other relatives. Mrs. O'Connell will claim that Mrs. Ohm's sisters have no right to the estate, as the property left was not community property, but that it was acquired through inheritance from Chas. Ohm's people, to whom it should now revert.

Mr. Ohm was at one time very wealthy, inheriting his brother Rudolph's money, and also received a share of the $90,000 estate of his father. At the time of his death, however, his estate was much depleted and the property left by his widow is not worth more than $20,000 at the most and consists chiefly of the ranch west of town and other minor holdings.

A Sad Case

The infant son of Mrs. Norman Hodgkinson (nee Alma Catter) was not expected to live the first part of the week, owing to a number of spasms of a serious nature. Mrs. Hodgkinson's husband was committed to the Napa State Hospital before the birth of her little one, and although she visited the asylum last week, she found him no better. It is understood that she will get a legal separation from him and that her parents, from whom she has been estranged on account of her marriage, will then take her back home. In the meanwhile the unfortunate wife and mother is stopping at a local hotel with her little one.

Tony Nufer has a Wild Dash

Tony Nufer was the plucky hero of a runaway on Main street at noon on Saturday and his escape from injury was truly wonderful.

He was driving one of his big stallions up the street, hitched to a light road cart, and in front of the American Hotel the girth broke suddenly. The shafts flew up in the air, the cart tilted back and the frightened horse dashed wildly up the street. Mr. Nufer, of course, went out of the vehicle, but he landed on his feet and clung to the lines and stayed with them, too. Many people ran to his assistance and he stopped the horse just as Supervisor Blair Hart grabbed the animal's head. No damage was done and nobody was hurt, but had the horse gotten away on the crowded street, somebody probably would have been hurt. After the horse was stopped it became frightened at a passing auto and nearly got away.—Petaluma Argus.

Miss Strawberry Richards and Miss M. Brown, two charming young telegraph operators from San Francisco, are spending the week at the Villa.

The benefit dances at the Bellevue Hotel and El Verano Villa were both grand successes, which brought in $200. Mrs. Rossi collected $93, which made a total of $293.

The last dance of the season will be given at El Verano Villa Saturday night, September 31st. Mr. Ghiradelli will bring his entire orchestra for the occasion and a very good time is expected to be had. Be sure and don't miss it, as a hard winter is looked forward to. Everybody is invited to a tend.

What Our Taxpayers Will Pay

The county tax levy for the ensuing year has been fixed at $1.90 on the $100. The levy is necessarily higher this year on account of the fact that the county's bonded indebtedness of over $107,000 is to be wiped out.

The rate in incorporated cities is $1.55. The city tax rate for Sonoma is 70 cents on every $100, which with the $1.55 makes a total of $2.25 for our taxpayers.

BATCHELOR CASE Aired in Court

Demurrer Interposed by Defendant's Attorney Sustained—Mrs. Batchelor Asks for Injunction and Alimony

The Batchelor case was aired in Judge Burnett's department of the Superior Court of this county Monday. By the looks of things it will be a bitter contest. The plaintiff, L. D. Batchelor, will seek to sustain his allegations that his wife was untrue to her marriage vows, that she was guilty of undue intimacy with M. Cummings, that she threatened to throw a lighted lamp and vitriol at him and that she was cruel to her children.

Mrs. Batchelor, on the other hand, will enter unqualified and emphatic denial to each and every charge of the complaint, and with this end in view the fight began on Monday, when her attorneys, Jas. P. Sweeney of San Francisco and J. R. Loppo of Santa Rosa, interposed a demurrer alleging that the complaint was uncertain in that it did not give dates of occurrences mentioned and that it was ambiguous.

Judge Burnett made an order sustaining the demurrer on the ground of uncertainty, and granted the plaintiff ten days to amend his complaint. Mrs. Batchelor then filed an affidavit and motion for alimony pending the divorce action. She asks for $50 a month, $500 attorney's fees and $150 costs. She maintains that Mr. Batchelor has $15,000 worth of property and that he is able to pay. Judge Burnett granted an injunction restraining the plaintiff from disposing of any of his property until the further order of the court. The hearing on the alimony will come up on October 2nd.

Morris Zoberbier Ill

Morris Zoberbier, the well-known piano man, and former resident of this valley, has been seriously ill for the past week at his home in Santa Rosa. About a month ago he injured himself while handling a piano, and since that time he has been complaining. His condition is now very serious.

The valley is still pretty well filled with visitors and the resorts are doing a good business. The local hotels are full and mine host Pellissier had forty guests all week.

Our Progress is Being Watched

The little town of Sonoma has voted $10,000 bonds for the erection of a new city hall. Ten thousand dollars is relatively as large to Sonoma as $500,000 would be to Oakland. But there is a difference between Oaklanders and the inhabitants of Sonoma. Which is why we vote down city hall propositions while they are voted up in Sonoma.—Oakland Tribune.

GLEN ELLEN By Aurora.

Miss H. I. Jasti had business in Sonoma Thursday.

Miss Queen and Mr. Ervin Queen were in Santa Rosa Wednesday.

Mrs. Wm. Hilton of Berkeley is visiting with Cassa Wagner.

Miss Maude Miner is spending a week in San Francisco visiting friends.

Mrs. Haskell and children went to Berkeley Saturday for a two-week's visit.

Behler Bros. have made up all their black grapes, which went twenty-eight per cent in sugar.

Miss L. Ball gave a farewell party in honor of Mrs. Widicker, who is returning to San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Froment entertained Miss Norvillia M. Davidson, teacher of Dunbar school, Wednesday evening.

Mr. Biannoni, an attache of the "Sonoma County Farmer," was in town on Wednesday on business and looking for items.

Mrs. Cecil Raymond, who was up from San Francisco to visit her mother, Mrs. Anna Behler, returned to her home Sunday.

Mr. F. Lemoine has started his crusher and is a very busy man, so if you have no grapes to sell do not call there and bother him.

Mr. Donald Bruce, editor of the "Political Record," of San Francisco, was in Glen Ellen Sunday on pleasure and business combined.

Mrs. Jackson and family of San Francisco returned home Sunday after a pleasant visit of three months in Glen Ellen. Mrs. Jackson is much improved in health.

Mr. Quinn received a coop of thoroughbred Plymouth Rocks on Thursday. He is one of our most enterprising young men and does not have anything but the best in his line.

Mrs. McLane, who has been stepping in Glen Ellen for the last four and a half months, returned to San Francisco Sunday, and of course the office of the waxed string trust has been moved, also.

Mr. Thos. Johnson is going to San Francisco the first part of next week to sell his dried fruit. He has a large quantity, all of which he bought in the green state and cured. Much of the fruit would have been a total loss to the community had it not been for Mr. Johnson, as no one would have gone to the bother of buying so many small lots. We all wish him success in securing top market prices.

Charged With Larceny

A. Gray has been taken to the county jail at Santa Rosa and charged with larceny committed at Glen Ellen.

It is alleged that Gray found a pocket-book containing money and jewelry and that he spent the money. It is also charged that he was seen to pick up the purse, and admitted to some one that he had it.

THE BONDS ARE AGAIN CARRIED

$10,000 Voted For the City Hall at the Election Held on Monday

The proposition of bonding the city of Sonoma for $10,000 for the new city hall came up before the voters here last Monday and was carried by a big majority. This is the second time the proposition has been voted upon, owing to the fact that the first election held and carried for the purpose was declared invalid.

Not as much interest was manifested last Monday as when the first election came off, but one hundred and nine ballots were cast in favor of the bonds and only ten against. There were a number of voters favoring bonds, who were out of town or the majority would have been larger still. At the previous election there were seven votes against the proposition, so it would seem that seven voters have been won over to the bond idea.

The city trustees will advertise the bonds for sale and undoubtedly it will not be long before stonecutters and carpenters will be busy putting up our new municipal hall in the plaza.

MONEY RAISED FOR FIRE SUFFERERS

Almost $300 has been raised for Peter Forni and family of El Verano, who recently lost everything in a fire at that place. The benefit dances given at the Bellevue Hotel and El Verano Villa netted substantial sums, and Mrs. Phil Rossi circulated a subscription list and succeeded in getting considerable money, also, for the fire sufferers.

Mr. Forni is very grateful for the good work done by his many friends, and for the liberal response of the people of this valley. He will now be enabled to put up a little home in which to house his wife and children.
